

Will the EU Run Out of People?

N-IUSSP | October 16, 2023

The European Union is standing at a demographic crossroads. Current trends suggest a looming population collapse, with birth rates dwindling and the median age steadily rising. This demographic shift could have profound implications for the continent. It threatens not only the economic vitality of the region, but also the long-term sustainability of social welfare systems, and could potentially exacerbate social and political tensions. In this Video, we will explore the root causes of this population decline, dissect its potential ramifications, and discuss prospective strategies to mitigate its impacts.
